SKIING ICELAND

Skiing Iceland take viewers backcountry skiing and camping under the midnight sun, sailing and skiing around the country's largest wilderness area, and ski touring among the country's highest peaks. Enjoy inspiring stories, images and video footage captured throughout ten years of human-powered adventuring in this wild and beautiful corner of the world.

OFF PISTE IN THE NORTHEAST

Whether it's fresh tracks after a surprise snowstorm here in Vermont, or ski mountaineering on the steepest flanks of New Hampshire's Whites or Maine's Katahdin, there is something undeniably special about backcountry skiing in the Northeast. Join Mohr and Johnson, and friends, as they share stories, photos and video of their latest snow-covered adventures from the Adirondacks to Quebec's Gaspesie.

ENDANGERED PATAGONIA SKIING CHILE'S RIO BAKER VALLEY

While travelling by bicycle through the southern Andes in 2000, Mohr and Johnson stumbled upon one of the planet's wildest reaches - Chile's Rio Baker Valley. Home to Patagonia's largest and wildest river, countless glaciers and vast reserves of unexplored mountains - the Rio Baker Valley is also threatened by industrial-scale hydroelectric development. Recently, on assignment for Patagonia and Backcountry Magazine, Mohr and Johnson returned to the region to spend 30+ days camping and skiing in the mountains above the Rio Baker Valley.
